

2010 - COLD January!

Wow what a start to the year!!! Yikes! Christmas snow storm and into the freezer after that.

In all honesty, it has not affected the Sanctuary Horses of Misfit Acres too much. Horses are truly amazing - on the days you would think they would be hiding inside their shelters, they are hanging around the round bale feeders just chomping hay.

Abbey is maintaining beautifully! So much so we have elected to eliminate the afternoon feed to see how it goes. Many times she just wasn't all that interested, but did finish anyway.

BJ & Montana were our other afternoon snackers but we finally got them going on a round bale. They have never been too crazy about round bales before.

Shadow is agreeing with her Cushing's medication more and more and we could not be happier about it! She is back to her spunky self. She and Abbey are the only ones in the front pasture right now during the cold.

Little Boy likes to stand sideways in the run-in shelter doorway and not let anyone else in so for the time being, he, Faith, and Dixie are in the coral in the arena. Faith has some troubles with one back hoof stiffening up and Dixie has the tenderest feet of the crew so they are inside.

Peanut just goes along with whatever as long as she gets her feed but we elected to put her in with the minis as well during this cold spell. She gets a little shivery sometimes.

Lucky looks like a frosty pony each morning in this cold weather. Apparently she is not going in either. April prefers to go in and not get any snow on her. She is a lovely girl but somewhat of a "Barn Baby".

And the young boys just want hay - and LOTS of it! Magic continues to heal from the attack on his leg. Augie continues to just be Augie and get into whatever sounds like fun!

Toesis is also proving to be a wonder! After his November surgery, he is back to playing like crazy with Acura again. It is so great to have the big guy back to his old self. Acura could not be happier to have her buddy back playing with her.

Winter time is a little quieter as far as our out and about times. We did attend the Christmas in Lake Crystal show on December 5 and had a great time! We do not have anything scheduled now until Spring when we will pack up the van again to attend town celebrations.

That pretty well wraps it up until February!! In the meantime, remember your standing invitation to visit the Sanctuary Horses of Misfit Acres!
